MUSIC NOTES

Andrea Gabrieli (1532/3-1585) was the uncle of the somewhat more famous Giovanni Gabrieli and held the post of organist of S. Marco in Venice from 1566 until his death. Widely travelled, his early works exhibit characteristics of the Franco-Flemish style, but following his meeting Orlando Lassus in 1562 he began to turn away from this, preferring the grandeur of antiphonal groups of singers and instrumentalists which came to characterise much music of the Italian late renaissance/early baroque, in particular that written for use in Venice. He was a prolific composer, writing sacred, secular and instrumental music – there are over a hundred extant madrigals and motets. The Missa Brevis a concise work, yet it displays a madrigalian ingenuity for rhythm and texture.

Although perhaps better known for his symphonic writing, Bruckner's church music forms a significant part of his output; his motets are succinct and beautiful encapsulations of the essence of his harmonic writing. That church music is central to Bruckner's oeuvre is hardly surprising, when one considers that Bruckner was a pupil and chorister at the Augustinian monastery of St Florian, and later Organist of Linz Cathedral. It is easy to hear how the dynamic range and dramatic use of silence in a motet such as Locus iste would have suited the large acoustic of this building.

Locus iste a Deo factus est	This place was made by God
inaestimabile sacramentum,	an inestimable sacrament;
irreprehensibilis est.	there is no fault in it.

Peter Phillips (1560/1-1628) was a chorister at St Paul's Cathedral, but – being a Catholic under threat of persecution – later fled to Rome, where he spent his formative years. After spending five years travelling in the service of Lord Thomas Paget, Phillips settled first in Antwerp, and then finally at the Chapel Royal of Archduke Albert in Brussels, remaining there until his death. Having taken holy orders in 1610, Phillips wrote only sacred music from this point to the end of his life. However, this music is still very much indebted to the Italianate techniques learned under Anerio in Rome, which show themselves in his earlier Madrigals.

Text and translation:

Ave, verum corpus natum	Hail the true body, born
de Maria Virgine:	of the Virgin Mary:
vere passum, immolatum	You who truly suffered and were sacrificed
in cruce pro homine:	on the cross for the sake of man.
cuius latus perforatum	From whose pierced side
unda fluxit et sanguine:	flowed water and blood:
esto nobis praegustatum,	Be a foretaste for us
in mortis examine.	in the trial of death.      O sweet! O merciful! O Jesus son of Mary, have mercy on me.
